THE STREET LIGHT POLES IN OUR CITY ARE RUSTED AND NEED TO BE PAINTED IN MANY AREAS (OR REPLACED). BUT INSTEAD OF PALE GREY, WHY NOT INVITE THE ARTS COMMUNITY TO DECORATE SOME OF THE POLES (HOLD A CONTEST?) GO SMALL (ONE OR 2 POLES DOWNTOWN) OR BIG (A POLE IN FRONT OF MAJOR BUILDING - CITY HALL, THE LEGISLATURE, THE CITADEL, IN EVERY NEIGHBOURHOOD!), WHATEVER CAN BE MANAGED. INSTEAD OF SOMETHING UTILITARIAN, THEY CAN BE WORKS OF ART!

THIS COULD ALSO BE APPLIED TO UTILITY BOXES (TELE, FIBRE, etc). IN VICTORIA, BC I SAW MAILBOXES DECORATED WITH PICTURES + TEXT ABOUT IMPORTANT MOMENTS / PEOPLE IN THEIR CITY HISTORY. Water warning

An increase in extreme rainstorms brought on by climate change could set the stage for a return of cholera to North America, according to a world-renowned water scientist.

Why Canada needs a National Water Policy

Water is vital to people's health and livelihoods. In Canada, there is no national strategy to address urgent water issues and no federal leadership to conserve and protect our water. The Federal Water Policy is more than 30 years old and badly outdated.

Canada's economy is built on the myth of an abundance of fresh water. In fact, only one per cent of Canada's fresh water is renewable. Water use and consumption in Canada will remain unsustainable unless protective measures are taken.

It is time for the Government of Canada to implement a comprehensive National Water Policy that:

Establishes national enforceable drinking water standards.

Canada does not have legally enforceable drinking water standards. In April 2008, the Canadian Medical Association Journal reported there were 1,766 boil-water advisories currently in place in Canadian municipalities, not including First Nations communities. Several communities have endured drinking water advisories for years, and 90 Canadians die from water-borne disease every year.

There are many examples of water tragedies in Canada. In 2000, seven people died in the community of Walkerton, Ontario when their drinking water was contaminated with E. coli virus. In 2001, more than 7,000 people were made sick during a three-month period by parasite-infected water in Battleford, Saskatchewan. In 2005, people in Kasechewan, a Cree community in Ontario, were forced to evacuate their homes because of water contamination.

Indigenous communities in Canada have been affected disproportionately by the water crisis. Despite repeated government pledges to ensure First Nations have access to clean drinking water their water is still often contaminated.

Recognizes water as a human right.

Water must be recognized as a human right at every level of government. This will ensure that all people living in Canada, without discrimination, are legally entitled to safe, clean drinking water and water for sanitation in sufficient quantities, and that inequalities in access are addressed immediately. The recognition of water as a human right will give communities lacking access to clean drinking water a legal tool to exercise this right. It will also provide legal recourse if a water source is damaged by industrial activities.

The recognition of water as a human right in international law would allow the United Nations to monitor the progress of states in realizing the right to water and to hold governments accountable. The Canadian government has consistently opposed the recognition of water as a human right at key UN meetings.

Declares surface and ground water a public trust.

The declaration of surface and ground water as a public trust will require the government to protect water for the public's reasonable use. Under a public trust doctrine private water use would be subservient to the public interest. Permission to extract groundwater under the public trust doctrine, for example, might be granted based on the ability to show public benefit for any proposed extraction. It may also lead to the creation of a hierarchy of use requiring that water use be allocated for ecosystems and basic human needs first, and not corporate needs such as large-scale industrial projects or by bottled water companies.

Creates a national public water infrastructure fund. Decades of cuts in infrastructure funding, coupled with the downloading of several programs and services to municipal governments, have resulted in a "municipal infrastructure deficit," conservatively estimated at $123 billion by the Federation of Canadian Municipalities. Communities across the country are in desperate need of money to pay for water pipes and filtration systems, which is now the responsibility of municipal governments. Some governments have started looking to private investors to rebuild infrastructure through public-private partnerships (P3s). Water is a public health and safety concern and is best managed, regulated and financed by public systems that are accountable to the community. When for-profit interests control drinking water, quality decreases and costs increase. Money is needed to ensure municipal infrastructure is rebuilt to provide publicly-owned and operated water infrastructure, not the failed P3 model currently being promoted and funded by the Harper government.

Provides a strategy to address water pollution.

Although regulating water pollution falls largely under provincial jurisdiction, the federal government is responsible for protecting fish-bearing waters through the Fisheries Act and controlling toxic substances under the Canadian Environmental Protection Act.

A strategy is needed to address the following water pollution concerns:

- Standards for industry and agribusiness. Every level of government must commit to creating and enforcing strict laws against industrial dumping, the use of non-essential pesticides on public and private lands, and the discharge of toxins into waterways.
- A slowdown of tar sands production. The tar sands projects release four billion litres of contaminated water into Alberta's groundwater and natural ecosystems every year. Toxins connected to tar sands production have been found as far downstream as the Athabasca delta, one of the largest freshwater deltas in the world.
- Removal of Schedule 2 from the Fisheries Act. Lakes that would normally be protected as fish habitat by the Fisheries Act are now being redefined as "tailing impoundment areas" in a 2002 schedule added to the Metal Mining Effluent Regulations of the Act. Under this schedule, healthy freshwater lakes lose all protection and become dump-sites for mining waste. Canada is the only industrialized country to allow this practice.
- National enforceable standards for sewage treatment. Canada has no national standards for municipal sewage treatment and wastewater effluent quality. As a result, 200 billion litres of raw sewage are flushed into our waterways every year.

Bans bulk water exports.

Canada and the United States share interconnected water systems. The need for such a ban on bulk water exports is pressing, given the pressure to send water to serve drought-prone areas in the United States. In the last two years we have seen detailed proposals from right-wing think tanks in both the United States and Canada to export water from Manitoba and Quebec. These projects are tremendously costly, require vast amounts of energy, and pose great threats to watersheds. Bulk water exports and diversions would leave Canada's water vulnerable to environmental depletion and to international trade challenges that could permanently open the floodgates to parched U.S. states.

Excludes water from NAFTA and all future trade agreements.

Under NAFTA, water is defined as an investment and a service. This protects the right of foreign investors to consume vast and unsustainable amounts of water to extract oil from the tar sands, to bottle ancient glacier water and groundwater, and to dump their waste into lakes. If a corporation is granted permission to export water anywhere in Canada, it becomes a tradeable good under NAFTA, and other provinces will have to grant similar access to corporations seeking water export rights. Only a clear exclusion of water from NAFTA and other trade agreements will avert this threat.

Edmontonians can take part & share their enthusiasm by displaying it on "Pendants". A theme can be chosen, like "What brings me JOY", or, "What makes me SMILE," etc. These Pendants can be recycled materials like plastic coffee covers from coffee grind cans, plastic/paper/foil plates - basically anything with enough flat surface for words or pictures. Markers and paint can be used. These Pendants can be adhered to whatever surface for display, or hung from whatever structure, with nails, glue, ribbon, string, etc. Moreover, the Pendants can be in different shapes.

Everyone who wants to participate can by picking their favourite building in Edmonton and take a snapshot of it. It can be any building you want ^{but} it has to be in Edmonton. On the back of the picture of your favourite building, that is now printed off, you would write why it's your favourite building in Edmonton. Every citizen who participated will meet at city hall on a certain date, with their printed off pictures for the making of this collage. Participants will choose to or not to help create the collage. This collage will be created on a giant piece of cardboard and people who choose will collaborate to organize all the pictures into a collage.

I think that a lovely communal fountain could put a smile on peoples faces. This fountain could be placed on site at the UofA. The fountain itself would describe the amount of creativity that the University has gone through over its years. This piece is filled with beautiful works of art and can inspire others to be creative. The piece will be bustled out of marble to show the artiveness of its holder.

- ① Spend as little public funds on bike paths as possible, i.e. use side streets just off a main artery, 108st between 99 Av and Kingsway is ideal. All you would need are a ~~very~~^{few} signs with a bike ^{logo} on them and that's it. No painted lines as these ^{all bike} are totally unnecessary. ② Critical... ^{and an expensive} component during snow season is ~~these~~ routes MUST be plowed before 7am after a ~~ben~~^{such a} + overnight snowfall. After ~~a ben + overnight~~ snowfall all routes are virtually inaccessible so the intrepid cyclist MUST ride in major routes in the flow of traffic and this sucks big time!

A giant piece of paper could be placed downtown with paints. People can come and leave their handprint on the paper. When it is full it would be a symbol of the city's diversity (different colours/sizes) and unity (hands). It could be displayed at a popular festival or in city hall.

DOODLE OR DESCRIBE your crazy and creative idea on the front of this postcard

Dear City of Edmonton,

My name is Robbie Nwan and I have a great idea to make our city, (OIL COUNTRY) better. Commonwealth Stadium (where the Eskimos play) is a great stadium, but to make it even better we should add a roof on the stadium so concerts can be held there too. The roof on the stadium should open and close with the switch of a button of course. So when it is nice out the stadium roof is open. When there is not very good weather the game can be held indoors because the roof can be closed. Now COMMONWEALTH STADIUM CAN BE USED IN THE SUMMER AND IN THE WINTER. It's much easier to set up concerts at a stadium than it is in a arena in my opinion because THERE IS MUCH MORE ROOM and this is also better because MORE PEOPLE CAN ATTEND THE CONCERT. After that we should destroy Rexall place and use the land for something else. The new arena will only be used for OILER GAMES.

I would like to Do A real life Five Nights at Freddy's. The game is hard to play on a screen. The animatronics kill you but you won't actually kill you. It would be 10+. I would need a Gymnasium to play this. If you survive you will be put in a draw. How it is you will sit in a room and people in the suit will come after you. It will grab you and take you to the exit.

Wider sidewalks. Pedestrian only streets.
More bike/walking paths, not shared

Make the city denser (more taller buildings) and stop spreading out. More frequent buses/LRT.

Paint our city with bright cheerful colors!

DOODLE OR DESCRIBE your crazy and creative idea on the front of this postcard

We need more bright colors such as murals, bright park benches, colorful fences, lights more colorful light posts, bus shelters etc. It would be more cheerful, especially in the long dark winter months.
Maybe January and February should be promoted as bright color months to encourage people to dress in bright colors like the people in Hawaii or Jamaica. Everyone dresses in dark colors, it's as if we are all heading to a funeral. Most of our vehicles are dark colors, same with the buildings - dull and boring. The new highrise at the end of Jasper Avenue had a wonderful orange top, people complained, so last year it was repainted white, making the whole tower look like all others. If Edmonton was more colorful we might be more happy. Our overpasses and bridges could use a splash of color or colored lights like in Calgary. Cement color and dark colors are depressing.

A nice thing to have in a big city
Like this is a sign saying Welcome in multiple languages, and many colours.

Encourage people to get out and enjoy the streets. Why do cars get all the focus? More separated and designated bike lanes and pedestrian-only streets.

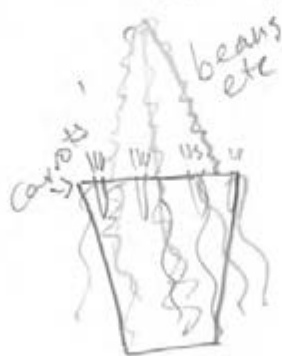

More open green spaces downtown. Add some shade to Churchill Square and the other barren concrete 'parks'.

More lights in winter to add brightness like around City Hall and Legislature at Christmas.

Add music to public spaces like in the LRT stations so waiting will be more enjoyable.

My crazy idea is... that every child in edmonton would have the right to make a masterpiece and donate it to the city of edmonton and then the city of edmonton would place the masterpieces in some place around edmonton
ex. city hall, malls, parks. etc
so every child would be able to see their masterpiece

What would be really great for Edmonton is if our walking/Running paths were lit or had lights for our dark winters, would it be possible to have solar power lights along some of our major city paths and stairs? Or perhaps, bright colored reflective ^{light} absorbent paint on tall distinct route markers along the path... say every 250 or 500 meters. Or perhaps colorful painted stair banisters that absorb sunlight and emit ^{light} at night. A winter night in Edmonton could be a little brighter and more user friendly & safe. Thanks for this!

I think a nature day would be cool. There could be a festival about animals with stories, games, food + drinks and people who would speak about animals. People could also go to nature parks which would let them see animals in their natural habitat. People could also go around and pick up garbage which would mean less pollution and animals would be safer since there would be less garbage they might eat.

Please consider my idea,

Weekends are 'Bubble Days':

Various city parks could have 'Bubble Stations' where huge tubs of bubble making solution (could use large coolers because of their sturdy build or huge Rubbermaid storage tubs for the vats of solution) are located in specific areas with an assortment of bubble making wands from small to huge. The general public, (kids to adults) are encouraged to come and experience the simple magic of making bubbles in the park on a weekend. If there is a sidewalk near by the bubble station the city could also supply an assortment of sidewalk chalk for creative mark making/drawing endeavors. (The picnic table being used for the event could be covered with a colourful piece of oil cloth from a fabric store, or a plastic table cloth from the dollar store, plus the city could create some fun colourful banners/signs to mark the stations and promote the location within each park with balloons tied to the display to blow in the breeze to attract attention.)

- ① create mini "urban parks" by transforming a parking space into an interesting interactive space. i.e with a bench, a giant game, a mini 'art gallery'
- ② make a 'pop up' art gallery - then make a space for people to do their own art and tack it to a bulletin board
- ③ Take-down frontyard fence initiative - ask people to imagine street w/o fences - create work team to help take them down (talk to me about this)

This is a park.
I have fun in the park

DOODLE OR DESCRIBE your crazy and creative idea on the front of this postcard

- Use neon colours
- Shovel more snow, have more sand in public places
- Using some bright coloured lights on roads during night time
- Have few roads in the city that make a light or a sound when you go on it

For a downtown location it would be nice to bring some natural light into the space. I thought the use of multiple mirrors would be fun.

Americans have all kinds of folk heroes;

Paul Bunyon, Davy Crockett, Randy Travis. It's time Canada had one! (Besides Johnny Cash)

- Lumberjack by day
- Lady/Bear killer by night
- Needs to wear loose jeans to hide giant balls.
- Lives IN the North Saskatchewan River
- Likes Little House on the Prairie

- Cleared the bear scourge from the prairies to clear the way for fur traders.
- Rode a moose one time, I think
- I may have been drinking while I made this.

The city needs more way-finding solutions to both downtown and Old Salem, but a cost-effective solution could be like Raleigh, NC, where tactical urbanism set up pedestrian and cycling orientated signs on light posts.

Needed along W. Hgte, 83 Ave (Future bike lane)

For the alleys in our core (both Downtown, and Old Strathcona) lattices should be erected along building's walls and vines grown to make them more hospitable. Providing shared rails or dynamic uses for our urban alleys for pedestrians/cyclists.

During the Saturday Farmers Market in Old Strath, rent out parking spaces on Whyte for food trucks and craft/food vendors to add to the overall options and traffic for the whole area and expand the activity of the market.
- Establish community signage promoting a map and destinations for the market. Advertise market.

Dear City Lab,

My idea is we can put a food bank box outside and clothes for homeless people. If they are hungry they can eat or if they are cold they can get warm. I think that they would be so happy and their life would be a little better. Or not so hard.

Turn the SE corner of Whyte Ave and 104 St into a "Speakers Corner." This was an under appreciated little space that could use some attention. Beef up the seating, install a small dais, post the rules and let the citizens have at it. I think the results could be fun!
