

NEIGHBOURHOOD DESCRIPTION

Callingwood North was annexed to the City of Edmonton in 1969 and was developed primarily in the 1970s. The residential component of the neighbourhood consists largely of row housing and low rise apartment buildings. The majority of residential units in Callingwood North are medium and higher density units with some lower density single and semi-detached homes.

Callingwood North is located south of Whitemud Drive and is bounded by 178th Street to the west, 170th Street to the east and 69th Avenue to the south. Although there are no commercial developments in Callingwood North, its neighbour Callingwood South has numerous retail businesses that serve residents of nearby neighbourhoods. The neighbourhood's proximity to Whitemud Freeway also provides residents with easy access to other parts of the city.

A dominant feature of the neighbourhood is Callingwood Park, which is one of the larger parks and recreation areas within the city. The park is linked to the open space west of the neighbourhood by the Arrowhead and Kikino Trails. Residents have access to large open recreation space and the West Jasper Place recreation centre.
