We want to thank each and every child who helped write this story. Over 1,600 kids across all twelve wards shared their vision of what kind of city they want to live in. This comic is as much written by them as it is for them. Everyday we make choices in the City Plan that will define Edmonton for decades to come. Kids need to be at the heart of those choices and that means asking them what they think.

Their answers did not disappoint!

We also want to send appreciation to both Superintendents Joan Carr from Edmonton Catholic School District and Darrel Robertson from Edmonton Public School Board who provided the leadership and believed in making this project a success. Additionally, we would like to thank all of the administration and dozens of teachers at 33 different fourth, fifth, and sixth grade EPSB and ECSD schools that facilitated this activity with their students. We thank you for your commitment to ensuring the voices of children are taken seriously.
"So what did your group make for the science fair?"

We built a city!

But we're gonna need a time machine to get there.

You're gonna want to suit up for this.
People have a lot of different names for it.
2 million people live here.

So we built them a sustainable transportation network.

But people still get around in different ways.

There's always stuff going on in the city we built.

And everyone is always welcome.
This place is extraordinary kids.

But there are a bunch of jobs to be done if we wanna keep it running. . . and building. . . and moving. . . and healthy. . . and beautiful. . . and clean.
WHERE ARE WE GOING NOW?

WE'RE ALREADY HERE. THIS IS HOW WE POWER OUR CITY

I WANT TO STAY IN THE CITY YOU ALL HAVE BUILT

BUT MS. Q, WE'VE GOTTA GO BACK

WHY WOULD WE EVER LEAVE?

BECAUSE NOW WE HAVE TO BUILD IT
