At our February 5th community liaison meeting earlier this year we shared plans to engage with communities regarding new residential use recommendations for the "remaining" vacant building sites.

These plans involve the City retaining a consultation firm to assist with future public engagement processes in each neighborhood to ensure robust information sharing and participation opportunities. This private-sector expertise will help develop and pilot an public engagement process that results in future residential use recommendations to Council.

City staff in the Office of Public Engagement have been working to complete a competitive Request For Proposal call opportunity to obtain submissions from experts in public engagement. The proposal call will be sent out in August and will close in September. At that time, City staff will review all submissions, select a firm to implement the process on pilot sites and inform communities of the successful firm. We look forward to sharing further information with you as it becomes available.
