

About the Service

Before you start building a new house or adding to an existing property, there are a few things you should know about zoning and permits. The City of Edmonton's Zoning Bylaw regulates development including the size, location and use of buildings, and the Building Permit Bylaw regulates how buildings are constructed. If you are building a house or an addition, both a development permit and a building permit are required.

Regulations

In residential zones – except the RPL (Planned Lot Residential) Zone – there are limits to the amount of the property that can be used for buildings. This is known as site coverage and the maximum site coverage for each building is:

- House..... 28 per cent
- Accessory buildings (total)..... 12 per cent (Includes garages, greenhouses and sheds)
- Total site coverage 40 per cent
- House plus attached garage 40 per cent

TIP Buildings may not be built on utility rights-of-way. Always check with local utilities before applying for development and building permits.

Why Permits?

Permits are here for your protection. They're the result of years of experience, testing and feedback. Having the proper permits will ensure what is being built is actually safe and that the appearance and use is consistent with the context of your neighbourhood.

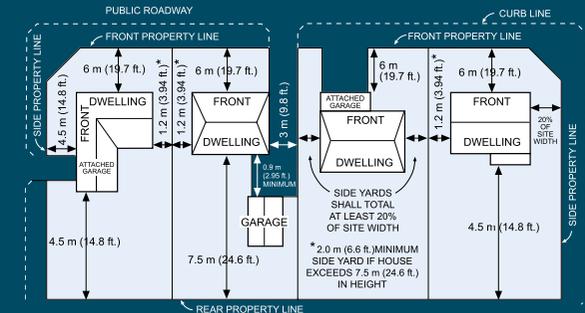

Zoning Verification

Your property's specific zoning may affect your plans.

To verify the zoning of a property, visit our office or <http://maps.edmonton.ca>

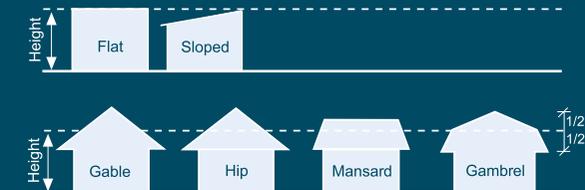

- Click on 'Zoning' located on the right side of the photo
- Review the disclaimer and accept it by pressing 'Ok'
- Click on 'Locate Title by Address' and enter the property's address
- Click on 'Search' to view its zoning and any overlay information

Measurement Regulations

Height requirements

When planning your home or addition, you must ensure that the structure is no higher than 10 metres (m), 32.8 feet (ft) or 2 1/2 storeys. If the building is over 7.5 m (24.6 ft.) tall, larger side yards are required.

Eaves requirements

Any eaves can project up to a maximum of 0.6 m (2 ft) into the required yard of 1.2 m (4 ft) or larger. If the eaves are within 1.2 m (4 ft) of the yard, they must be non-vented.

What You Need to Apply

When you apply for a development permit and a building permit, you must provide:

- The municipal address and/or the plan, block and lot number (the legal description of your property found on your tax notice).
- Three sets of any of the following construction plans drawn to a minimum scale of 1:100, showing all dimensions:
 1. Site plan or survey
 2. Foundation plan
 3. Floor plans
 4. Elevation drawings (showing the view from north, south, east and west)
 5. Cross-section plan and construction specifications
- Required application fees.
- Photographs are necessary if construction has occurred without a permit. In this case, application fees are doubled.

Application forms for construction of a new house (New House Combo Application form) and for additions to existing houses (Residential Building Application form) can be found online at www.edmonton.ca.
